Indian Peaks HORIZONS

Last night at Gordy Tucker's lecture I had the pleasure of meeting three young women who were coming to their first CAS meeting. Our excellent 1992 speakers series has attracted many new members. There are lots of activities planned for the summer, and new members are welcome to participate in them all.

Try archaeology in the mountains. In June, there's the Sawtooth Field Trip led by Steve Cassels, author of The Archaeology of Colorado, and our own Steve Montgomery, to see some of those high altitude game drive sites described in Jim Benedict's April lecture "Footprints in the Snow". In July you can choose to work with either Doug Bamforth or Sue Struthers in the Routt National Forest. In August, there's the hearth excavation near Arapahoe Pass with Jim Benedict (See the April Calumet).

Closer to home, try an informal walking survey of the old smelter at Boulder Valley Ranch on May 2 with Dock Teegarden. Dock, who grew up in the Boulder area, speaks softly but with great authority on matters of local history. On June 13 we will map and record the smelter site under the watchful eye and expert guidance of our own Rick Lippincott. This is an excellent opportunity to get acquainted with an important historic site in Boulder City Open Space - and also with Dock and Rick.

Those who remember last year's outing to Chaco and Aztec with noted author, Florence Lister, will be pleased to know that Florence has agreed to lead us on a Grand Tour of the Four Corners, car camping and day hiking to points of interest. Look for more about this exciting introduction to Southwest Archaeology later on.

This is just a sample of the smorgasbord of activities available to CAS members this summer. I urge everyone, and especially new members, to join in the work and the fun we've planned for the months ahead.

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION Dennis Stanford's work in archaeology has focused on the Paleoindian occupations (5,000B.C. & earlier) of North and South America, China, the Arctic, and especially of the western United States.

Dennis became the curator of anthropology at the Smithsonian Institute in 1972, and immediately undertook the extensive 3 year excavation of the Jones-Miller Site in eastern Colorado, a Hell Gap Complex bison kill from 8,000 B.C. This large excavation exhibited his aggressive and thorough proficiency in field investigation and analysis, and his command of the additional disciplines of zoology and geology for which he has become well known.

Working with his wife, Peggy Jodry, Dennis returned to excavate in Colorado in 1981 & 1983 at the Stewart's Cattle Guard Site in the San Luis Valley. This is a Folsom bison kill dating from 8,800 B.C.

In 1982 Dennis co-authored, with George Frison, the report on the Agate Basin type site in Wyoming dating from 8,040 B.C.

Dennis has either worked on or visited nearly every Paleoindian site in the western U.S. In a forthcoming paper he proposes a possible east coast origin for Colorado's earliest known inhabitants, the Clovis people, dating back to 9,000 B.C.

Dennis' talk will concentrate on new information regarding all of these ancient peoples.

SALE OF LAND ADJACENT TO RABBIT MOUNTAIN ARCHAEOLOGICAL SITE IS IMMINENT - AN OPEN LETTER FROM THE INDIAN PEAKS EXECUTIVE BOARD.

TO: Carolyn Holmberg and
Parks and Open Space Advisory Committee
P.O. Box 471
Boulder, CO 80306

Dear Ms. Holmberg and POSAC Members:

A 320 acre parcel of land at the top of Rabbit Mountain is going to be offered for sale in 35 acre parcels to be developed as homesites and these property owners will have legal access to Eagle Wind Trail.

Rabbit Mountain is a valuable cultural resource for the people of Boulder County. One archaeological feature directly abuts Eagle Wind Trail and would be destroyed if the road was improved. There are probably more stone circles on the parcel in question.

In order to protect the cultural resources of this area, we urge POSAC to give this property a highest priority for purchase as additional county open space.
